Jaco admires the focus, discipline and dedication of people excelling in their chosen field, be it professional sports, business or education.

Witnessing both the creation of a new space and its enjoyment by students and staff is deeply satisfying for Project Manager Jaco Van Staden.

Jaco moved to Australia from South Africa to pursue new opportunities and hasn't looked back. The Bachelor of Science in Quantity Surveying graduate changed career to Project Management and brings valuable expertise to the role.

Problem solving is something Jaco thrives on. Complex and dynamic projects call for collaborative decision making and a clear vision, and Jaco relishes the challenge.

"I enjoy solving problems and coming up with solutions to difficult fixes, something which there are plenty of in my role as a Project Manager."

Jaco values directness in all communications, believing it creates greater trust, speed and transparency within a project and between its stakeholders.

Besides the satisfaction of the actual build, the collaborative nature of Honeywill's culture is something that drives Jaco on a daily basis.

"Knowing I get to work with a team of talented individuals is a great joy. I enjoy discussing projects with them and listening to everyone's differing perspectives," he says.
