When he's not navigating the challenges and opportunities of his clients, Peter likes nothing more than the twists and turns of a country road on the weekend. An avid car enthusiast, Peter loves the freedom of the open roads and the possibilities they bring - much like his approach to work.

The prospect of creating spaces that exceed client expectations and bring joy to those using them is what drives Peter.

"The most rewarding part of my work is seeing the difference our projects make to the kids and teachers using the facilities we create. There's nothing quite like heading back to a school after a project has been completed and seeing firsthand the enjoyment that our work brings," he says.

Peter's extensive experience within the commercial construction industry as a quantity surveyor means he is uniquely attuned to a client's financial as well as creative needs. Balancing the two successfully is something Peter excels at. His eye for detail makes him instrumental in the early planning stages of a project.

A collaborative and approachable leader, Peter encourages his team to feel comfortable enough to explore new ways of working. "I prefer an open-communication style that allows people to think outside the box and approach things differently. I believe strongly in an open exchange of ideas," he says.

Peter's calm and pragmatic approach allows his projects to run as seamlessly as possible and provides an invaluable level of maturity due to his in-depth experience within the Queensland education sector.

Additionally, the tight-knit nature of the industry means building long-term relationships is crucial; it's something Peter is passionate about. "It's important to maintain positive relationships with everyone you work with. It's at the heart of what we do and ultimately results in the best outcome for the client," he says.
